

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
List of Illustrations	xi
1 Introduction	1
The Starting Point	1
Borrowing the Term “Archaeology”	2
Books Written in Tibetan	3
Statistics in Book History	4
My Fieldwork, Sources, and Experiments	5
2 Methods: An Uneasy Alliance of Science and History	12
Many Typologies of Book Features	13
Tools to Read What is Not Written	13
Survey of Disciplines Used for Dating	17
Study of Paper in Books	21
3 Tibetan Books: A Craft and Artistry	47
4 Indigo, Gold, and Human Blood: Tibetan Illuminated Manuscripts	76
Manuscripts versus Prints	76
Patronage and Ownership	77
Gold Manuscripts	79
Format and Book Binding Style	81
Illuminations and Decorations	85
Calligraphy	95
Page Layout	96
Ink	99
Writing Tools	101
Paper	102
5 Tibetan Woodblock Printing Culture	116
Origin of New Technology and the Early Tibetan Woodblock Prints	116
Production of the Tibetan Buddhist Canon	125
Edition, Re-edition, and Reprint: Technical Identity of Hundred-Volume Sets	132

Early Editions of Tibetan Kanjur Produced in Beijing	136
Mongolian Kanjurs	158
Tibetan Kanjurs Produced in Tibet and Tibetan Borderland	163
Patterns of Physical Features in Selected Editions of Tibetan Kanjur in a Regional and Temporal Perspective	176
6 A Survey of Tibetan Paper	179
History of Paper in Central Asia and Tibet	179
Himalayan Papermaking Plants and the Localization of Tibetan Paper and Book Origins	183
Papermaking Methods in Tibet Traceable in Books	191
Papermaking Tools and Technology	192
7 Conservation	201
Typical Damage to Tibetan Books	206
Selected Procedures of Conservation Treatment	216
Appendix 1 Selected Items from the Tibetan Collections of the British Library	225
Appendix 2 Features of Paper in Selected Sets of Tibetan Kanjur	252
Appendix 3 Transcription of the Yongle Covers Inscriptions	262
Appendix 4 Selected Items from the Tibetan Collection of the Berlin State Library	265
Appendix 5 Selected Items from the Tibetan Collection of the Library of Congress, Washington DC, the Asian Reading Room	276
Bibliography	288
Index	299